WELCOME

The Start of a New School Year...

Each August Bradley University holds Welcome Week to introduce freshmen to campus life and to reacquaint returning students with the life they left only a few months before. The week is packed with activities and events for the students to attend starting from the moment they arrive on campus.

For new and old students alike, moving into the dorms on Saturday, August 19 had the potential of being a very stressful occurrence. Instead, thanks to the help of the Bradley Greek system, things went very smoothly. "The Greeks all jumped at the chance to help me move in since I live on the ground floor," said Adam Carton, a freshman advertising major.

To give overwhelmed students a break, students had the chance to see a movie in Olin Quad

At dusk, "American Pie" was shown and free popcorn and soda were distributed to the viewers.

Welcome week also allowed students to sample food from area restaurants at the Taste of Bradley. "The Taste of Bradley gave me a good idea of what's around Peoria," explained freshman biology major Stephanie Poland. "It was a good way to advertise the restaurants," added Colin Moss, a freshman engineering physics major.

Students could also browse through the wide array of clubs and organizations Bradley offers at the Activities Fair or test their skills on various carnival games. "I was in a daze at the activities fair," said Poland.

"The week as a whole was overwhelming," concluded freshman special education major Ginger Logemann.

Homecoming 2001

Homecoming at Bradley is a very untraditional event. Instead of bonfires and big bulk football boys, there are parades and snow on the ground. Yes, Bradley's homecoming is in the middle of basketball season. Homecoming 2001 was held during the week of February 5-10.

Penny voting to determine king and queen was done in the Student Center and at various locations around campus. That event raised $650 for Easter Seals. Saturday morning featured a race and a parade. This year's parade featured 15 floats.

Alumnae love to come back to visit the campus with their families. One alumnus, whom hadn't been on campus in 30 years, was amazed at the Student Center. "It really does look like a Student Center now!" he exclaimed.

The highlight of the weekend was the Bradley men's basketball 65-57 victory over Missouri Valley Conference foe Wichita State. Go Braves!

Roughly an hour before heading out, sophomore secondary education major Rachel Cramer and her friends are busy getting ready for an evening of fun. "I enjoy going to parties with my friends," she said, "we like dance parties the best." Cramer is just one of many Bradley students who enjoys the social party scene Bradley offers. "Phi Tau's haunted house and Sigma Chi's derby days have been some of the parties I've really enjoyed this year," said Cramer. She also added that partying at Bradley is made easier because, "everything's so close and in walking distance."

While attending Greek functions is a major weekend event for many, it's not the only thing Bradley students do with their evenings. Scott Henson, sophomore biology major, enjoys, "watching a movie, sitting around and hanging out with my friends, or going out to eat."

Freshman electrical engineering major Nicholas Patrick likes his evenings even simpler than that. "I enjoy spending quality time on my computer."

From parties to movies or just sitting in a dorm room, Bradley manages to offer enough diversions to occupy students' night life.

ST. JAMES

A NEW OPTION FOR OFF-CAMPUS HOUSING...

Story by: Lisa Dwyer

Many students look forward to living off campus their junior and senior years. For 527 this year, that solution came in the form of the St. James apartments. Twelve brick buildings sit on a 9.5-acre site just east of campus. The buildings wrap around an area being developed for Bradley recreational fields.

Junior public relations major Christine Byers enjoys her four-bedroom apartment because it's a, "good place to start the real experience of living on your own." Paul Coussens, a sophomore radio/TV major, is looking forward to moving into the St. James apartment he rented for next fall. "The best part about the St. James apartments will be having my own room where I can buckle down and study without interruptions. Privacy is nice." Sophomore biology major Jill Horton is also looking forward to moving into St. James. "I can't wait to cook food in a real kitchen again!"

Students looking to rent a St. James apartment in the future should start looking early. According to a Cambridge Property Management spokeswoman, the apartments this year went "pretty fast." She said that since the apartments are new, furnished, and close to campus, their popularity is huge. Byers would encourage others to live in the St. James apartments, however she doesn't hesitate to warn them about the "parking nightmare."

Having your own living room is one of the many advantages the St. James apartments offers to juniors and seniors.

When the Bradley womens basketball team qualified to play at the Missouri Valley Conference tournament members of the Bradley basketball band were there to cheer them on. During the women's game on the campus of Southwest Missouri State, freshman Sandra Schneider snapped a photo of euphonium players Graham Burtoft and Brent Becker. "They looked cute and they were posing," said Schneider, "so I took their picture."

Burtoft and Becker are regulars at all of the mens and womens basketball games. "They have a lot of school spirit when they're together," said Schneider. The two are known to decorate their horns, wear sunglasses, and blow bubbles.

Schneider decided to submit her photo to the first- ever Anaga photo contest after seeing contest signs around campus and being encouraged by her friends.

Students

Imagine going to college thousands of miles from your home. Not only have you never stepped foot on campus before move-in day, your native tongue doesn't even resemble what everyone around you speaks. This scenario is one that fits the ninety-six international students who were enrolled at Bradley for the fall 2000 semester.

Why would students want to travel across borders and even oceans just for an education? "The colleges are better (in America)," said Edward Wanyandeh, a student from Kenya.

There is a wide range of reasons for coming to the United States for a college education. Some students come so they can establish themselves and continue life in America long after their college days are over. Other students come here to receive their education so they have a chance at a more prestigious job once they return to their native country. Some students, like Evgeny Nosovskiy, a freshman living in Williams Hall, is an international business major from Sofia, Bulgaria.

Wanyandeh, are here for the experience more than the education.

Another possibility of a student who fits the above mentioned scenario is the one who is American but lives in another country. Mark Brewer is an American, but he resides in Germany due to a military family. Mark's reason for coming to America for school was simple: "I'm American and I've never lived here and I thought I probably should."

Students come to American colleges and universities for many different reasons, some stay here and some go back home. Whatever the reason they come, they're all here to get the best education that they can get. As Brewer said, "Americans have the best undergraduate program in the world."

"When Wayne Brady held my arm, I could have cried! The show was hilarious!" exclaimed freshman business major Valerie Isbell the lucky student whom Brady used during his improv routine. Many other students had similar reactions to comedian Wayne Brady's November 28, 2000 performance. "He's incredibly funny and I love improv comedy," said Justin McGrath, a freshman biology major.

Brady, a regular performer on ABC's "Who's Line Is It Anyway" show was able to perform to a packed audience at the fieldhouse thanks to the hard work done by ACBU and SABRC. "It cost about $25,000 to bring Wayne Brady here," said SABRC chairperson Andrea Kuthe. Fellow SABRC member Jill Cocayne explained that the money used to bring Brady to campus came from the special events reserve fund.

All of their effort was well worth it for the students though. "Where else can you get five-star entertainment from a big name for only three bucks?" said freshman journalism major Nichole Burkey. Sophomore history major Nathan Whittom agreed, "this is high class entertainment."

"The audience's willingness to participate made the whole show great," said Kuthe. Plus, as Burkey said, "it was a great break from studying."

CAMPUS JOBS

Many students at Bradley choose to work on campus in addition to taking classes. Work-study or not, there is something for everyone. Working at places such as the library, Haussler Hall or the Student Center give students the advantage of having schedule flexibility and the opportunity to interact with other students.

Junior marketing major Michelle Buckert enjoys her job as an admissions tour guide because she gets to meet new people all the time. However, of all the advantages that working can give a student, the greatest is a steady paycheck. Both Pam Bosanac, a sophomore business computer systems major, and Rebecca Ruch, a freshman music education major, enjoy having the extra spending money. Bosanac works in the business management office and the music department employs Ruch. In addition to the extra money, a campus job can be an excellent resume booster.

IN 1969, BRADLEY STUDENTS MADE WORK DIFFICULT FOR LIBRARY EMPLOYEES AND STUDENT WORKERS BY CHECKING OUT OVER 4,000 BOOKS IN PROTEST OVER LIBRARY INADEQUACIES.

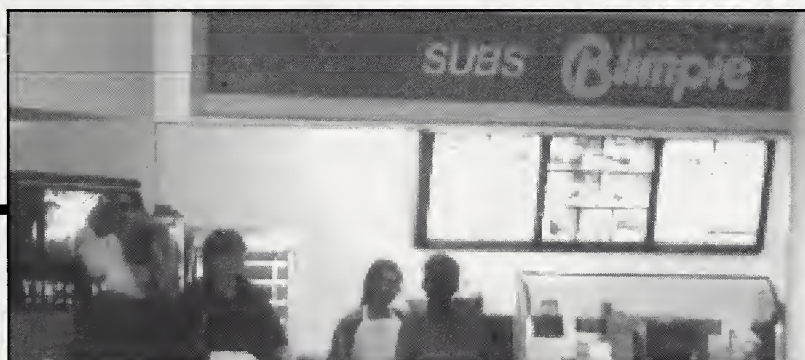

As an assistant resident advisor, sophomore Meghan Galbreath is required to spend time in University Hall's office distributing packages to students.

Stephanie Block leads a tour of potential students as part of her campus job.

The new Cafe Bradley provides job opportunities for many Bradley students.

Bradley students were able to take a break from the hectic end-of semester schedule on April 29, 2001. The band Vertical Horizon, made popular by their song "Everything you Want" performed a 7 p.m. show at the Robertson Memorial Fieldhouse.

The crowd, comprised primarily of Bradley students, was enthralled by the band's performance. It helped that the band was "enthusiastic with our crowd," said freshman bio-chemistry major Eric Larson. "The whole thing was good," said sophomore Joelle Weimer.

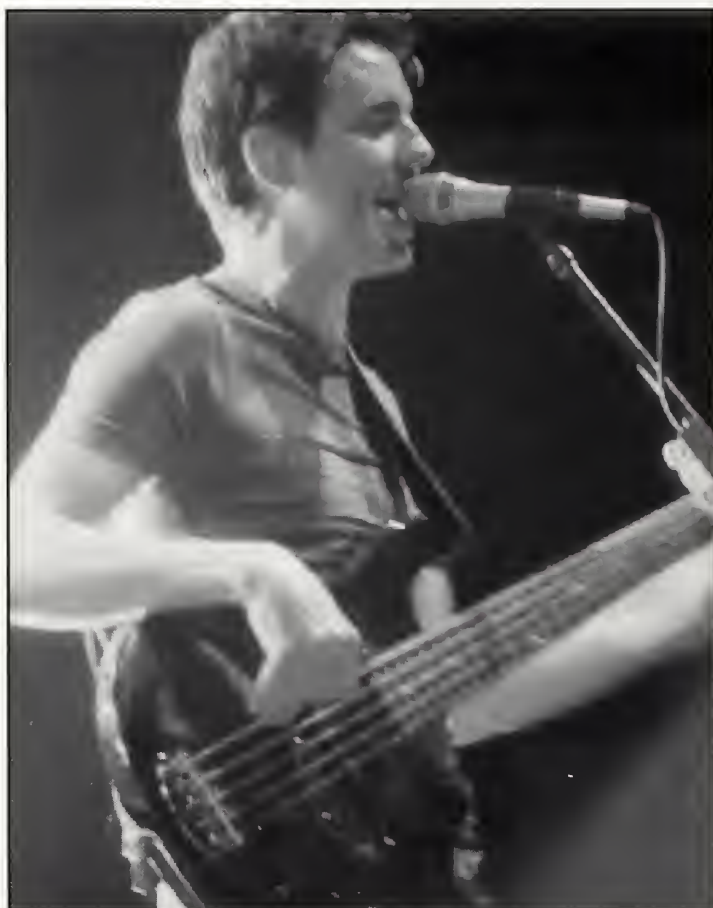

Ben Cudia, a freshman history/secondary education major enjoyed "the music, the lights, and the shiny bald-headed lead singer." The lead singer, Matt Scannell, along with the rest of Vertical Horizon, Keith Kane, Ed Toth, and Sean Hurley, performed a majority of their songs in addition to a few cover songs.

"I enjoyed when they played U2," said Jeff Shimek, a sophomore health science major. The band played one of U2's most recent songs, "Beautiful Day" in their encore performance.

Study Abroad

January Interim

While many students were relaxing at home during January, over a hundred Bradley students were taking classes overseas. The January Interim abroad program offered students the chance to travel to England, Spain, or Denmark.

"The trip was great because it was structured enough to ensure that we got to do certain things that every London tourist is suppose to do. At the same time, we had enough free time to see what we wanted to see," said Mickie Best, a junior civil engineering major. Best took CON 396, Construction Estimating, in London.

While a large amount of time was spent in makeshift hotel classrooms, students did manage to get out and see the sights. "I enjoyed climbing up the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral because you could see the structure supporting the dome," said Best.

Erin Lossman, a sophomore nursing major, enjoyed visiting Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum. "It was not at all what I expected. Everything was so real looking."

Junior journalism and political science major Ed Dillion said his favorite thing about the January Interim abroad was, "spending two weeks with all of my friends in an awesome country."

The trip provided for many a way to visit another country and get credit for it as well. "It was a good experience," concluded Best.

KAPPA DELTA

One of the highlights of the 2000-2001 school year for many women was the start of the Eta

Beta chapter of Kappa Delta Sorority. The sorority held its formal rush several weeks after the rest of the Greek System, but still boasted a pledge class of 99 ladies. Kappa Delta replaces the former Phi Sigma Sigma, which was eliminated because of failure to meet membership requirements.

The house was dedicated on November 12. "I'm very excited to be part of the beginning of a new Bradley tradition, and I can't wait to share our pride with new members in the future," commented one new member.

Throughout the year, Kappa Delta began many new traditions within their house and throughout the campus. Events such as the White Rose Bowl, a flag football tournament to support one of their philanthropies, helped make this year an exciting one.

Kappa Delta is now the sixth sorority at Bradley University. We wish them the best of luck throughout the years and hope they can live up to their motto of being "beautiful, honorable, and highest."

New school President David C. Broski receives congratulations on his new position. Broski took office in June of 2000.

New Leadership

SCHOOL PRESIDENT

When the 2000-2001 school year began, Bradley students were under new leadership. Dr. David C. Broski took office in June of 2000 to become Bradley's ninth president. Prior to coming to Bradley, Broski served as chancellor of University of Chicago, and before that he was dean and provost at Michigan State and Ohio State.

One of the first changes Broski made upon arriving on Bradley's campus was eliminating the bobcat as the mascot. Broski made the decision because the mascot did not catch on, and it was confusing. Despite some people's beliefs, he is not planning to change the name Bradley Braves and a new mascot will not replace the bobcat.

Broski's goals for the future include finishing the planned projects at Bradley, Olin, and Westlake Halls, as well as improving the library collection. He would also like to add an athletic recreation facility that can be used for fitness and intramural sports, while also helping Bradley's athletic teams compete at high levels in Division I sports.

He also really wants to maintain Bradley's competitiveness with tuition, and he wants Bradley to remain a good value. This includes having good facilities for the students to learn and be creative. He said, "For me, there's no greater environment than a college campus. I enjoy the active life of the mind, reading and learning."

Food Court

NEW & IMPROVED

Where to have meals is a decision that Bradley students make on a daily basis. However, it is not a difficult decision with the wide variety of eateries available both on and off campus. This year, one more possible location was added to the on-campus choices.

The long-awaited Student Center Food Court was formally opened on September 12, 2000 and features a Taco Bell, Blimpies, Ritazza, and smothie place. The court is fully stocked with a lovely view of the outside as well as a dining area. In addition to the variety of meals now available, the new Food Court played host to numerous comedians, musicians, and other entertainers throughout the year.

The new Student Center Food court has been an excellent choice for students seeking variety, and will continue to do so.

Gone But...

NOT FORGOTTEN

On the morning of September 7, 2000, Bradley University learned of the tragic death of sophomore Lynn Pastucha. Pastucha was an excellent student with a 4.0 average, as well as a promising future. She was a member of the Bradley basketball team. She earned a starting position mid-season of her freshman year, and averaged 6.4 points a game as the center.

The environmental science major was described as a happy, caring, fun-loving person who will be greatly missed. Her death, ruled a suicide by the Peoria County Coroner, sent waves of shock and grief throughout the Bradley campus. The Bradley Scout published several articles on the story, keeping students informed about the case.

The Anaga wishes to keep Lynn Pastucha's memory alive in the hearts of all who read this, and hopes that despite the pain and sadness that comes with these memories, she will be remembered with fondness and caring for all whose lives she touched.

Olin Hall

THE CONSTRUCTION

The Olin Hall of Science underwent construction in the spring of 2000, and the construction continued throughout the year. The expansion and renovation of the building should be completed by the fall of 2002. The addition will provide 59,000 square feet more space to the building. Upon completion of the project, over 135,000 square feet of space will have been added or renovated. Olin Hall will be the home of new laboratories, classrooms, research areas, and offices to accommodate the many students and faculty who take or teach biology, chemistry, physics and physical Therapy classes. A greenhouse will also sit atop the new addition. The expansion and renovation of Olin Hall is the largest capital project in Bradley's history, costing a sum of twenty million dollars.

In the meantime, students who have classes in the building will just have to put up with the noise of construction. —Nichole Burkey

Sydney, Australia was the place to be in the sports world when the Summer Olympic Games took place there September 13 through October 1.

American Marion Jones held the Olympic spotlight as she attempted to win five gold medals in a single Olympics, a feat that has never been accomplished. She successfully won gold medals in the 100 meter dash and 200 meter dash with times of 0.75 and 21.83. She also ran on the gold medal winning 4x400 team. Her attempt to make a golden sweep fell short when she received the bronze medal in the long jump and anchored the 4x100 team to bronze. Although she didn't run away with five gold medals, she became the first woman to win five track medals in one Olympics.

American Michael Johnson also put his name in the Olympic record book, as he became the first man to win back-to-back gold medals in the 400 meter run with a time of 43.82.

The United States mens and womens swimming teams also made themselves known to the world. The mens 400 medley relay team set a world record of 3:33.73 on the way to a gold medal. The womens 400 medley relay team also turned in a gold medal, world record performance with a time of 3:58.30.

American swimmer Jenny Thompson earned one bronze and three gold medals this Olympics to bring her total medal count to ten, making her the most decorated female Olympian.

SUPERBOWL XXXV

It was supposed to be the lowest scoring Superbowl in history. It was supposed to be a battle of two awesome defenses. There weren't supposed to be any touchdowns; all scoring was supposed to be done by the field-goal kickers. The Baltimore Ravens proved all the predictions were wrong.

When the Baltimore Ravens took on the New York Giants on January 28, 2001 at Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, they were there for one thing only: to win Superbowl XXXV.

Midway through the first half, Baltimore's Brandon Stokley broke open to receive a pass from Trent Dilfer which fueled the Ravens to score 17 unanswered points. The only scoring the Giants did was a 97-yard kickoff return by Ron Dixon. The Ravens responded with one of their own as Jermaine Dixon ran the distant 84 yards to spark another 17-0 run. The Ravens won the game 34-7. Ravens' middle linebacker, Ray Lewis, was named Superbowl MVP.

NASCAR TRAGEDY

NASCAR fans of all ages were in shock on February 25, 2001. That was the day that Dale Earnhardt crashed his Chevrolet Monte Carlo into a wall at nearly 200 miles per hour. "The Intimidator" died instantly. The Daytona 500 was in its final lap when the back of Earnhardt's car wiggled and then veered toward the lower portion of the track. It then took an abrupt right, got hit by Ken Schrader, and then barreled head-on into turn four of the Daytona International Speedway.

The news of the tragedy shocked many people because Earnhardt had survived many crashes that looked much worse than the one that took his life.

Earnhardt, who had been referred to as "The Michael Jordan of NASCAR," was running in third place when his car hit the wall. Earnhardt died after his seat belt broke and he cracked his skull from the front to the back.

Even for an election where the polls were so close, nobody expected a 36-day long Election

George W. Bush of Texas narrowly defeated sitting Vice President Al Gore after a disputed recount of some

Both Vice Presidential candidates made campaign stops in Peoria, giving students from each party the chance to have a piece of the campaign action. The Curse

FACT OR FICTION?

President Bush is probably looking over his shoulder quite a bit these days, hoping that he's managed to escape The Curse. If he manages to avoid it, he will break a 160-year-old tradition.

Since 1840, every president elected in a year ending in 0 has died, or nearly died, in office. Many think it's nothing more than a coincidence, but it keeps happening like clockwork every 20 years.

William Henry Harrison started the tradition after being elected in 1840. He came down with pneumonia the day he was sworn in, and he was dead in less than a month.

Illinois got into the game by 1860, when our own Abraham Lincoln was elected to his first term. Lincoln was assassinated barely three days after the Civil War ended in 1865.

By the time James A. Garfield was assassinated in 1881, people were beginning to talk about "The Curse."

Garfield had been elected in 1880, and had served less than a year when he was shot.

William McKinley was re-elected in 1900; before 1901 was finished, an anarchist had shot him.

Everyone hoped by 1920, Warren G. Harding would break The Curse. Just as Harding came under a cloud of suspicion for unethical behavior, he died suddenly while on a trip out west.

Nobody expected Franklin Roosevelt to fall victim either. He had survived polio and won his third term in 1940. Three months after his fourth inauguration, he died while on vacation.

John F. Kennedy gave our nation the image of vigor and legacy of "Camelot." His 1960 election also led to his Dallas assassination by Lee Harvey Oswald.

Some people say that the curse was broken after Ronald Reagan's 1980 election. He was shot in 1981. He survived, but only barely.

Pro Choice

THE ABORTION PILL

In September, 2000, the FDA announced the final approval of the abortion pill Mifeprex, more commonly known as RU-486, dealing a hard blow to anti-abortion activists. The pill, manufactured by Roussel-Uclaf, was given conditional approval by the FDA in 1996, two years after it had first been marketed on US shores.

The pill has been available in Europe since September of 1988, however it was not shipped to the US until November of this year, where it was initially available in 16 of the 50 states.

The new procedure is an alternative to the more invasive surgical abortions. The pill is taken under doctor supervision, and two days later a second drug, Misoprostol causes the uterus to contract and expel the fetus. Six hours following the dose of misoprostol, most women will complete the abortion.

Ralph Nader

GREEN WITH ENVY

For thirty years, a man by the name of Ralph Nader has proclaimed himself to be "Saint Ralph," and he considered himself the only friend to the average citizen. It's funny that all of his "friends" didn't vote for him in the 2000 Presidential Election. Nader was the Presidential candidate for the Green Party. Although Nader did not receive a single electoral vote, he did pick up hundreds of thousands of single votes.

Many Democrats were angered, saying that Nader lost the election for their candidate, Al Gore. Many people claimed, "A vote for Nader is a vote for Bush." No one knows for sure. One of Nader's goals was to build a vision that brings new and lasting opportunities. The country will have to wait and see if Nader has another opportunity to run for president in 2004, or if this was his last chance.

School Shootings

COPYCAT CRIMES

The echoes of gunshots were heard throughout the country during the month of March. The first shots were heard in the hallways of Santana High School in Santee, California on March 5. Just two days later, Bishop Neumann Junior-Senior High School in Williamsport, Pennsylvania was threatened with gunfire. March 24 brought more gunshots to the state of California, this time in El Cajon, where Granite Hills High School is located.

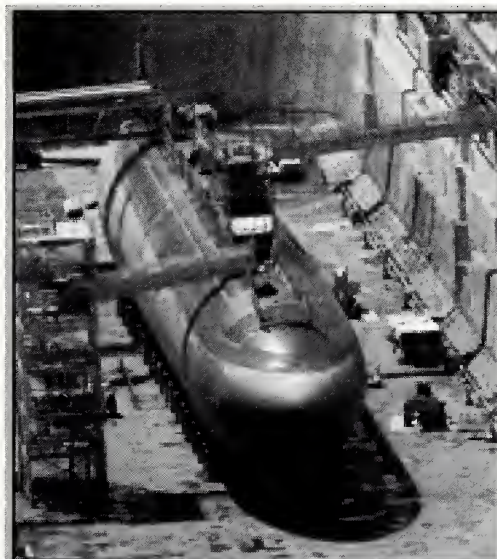

The shooting at Santana High occurred when fifteen-year-old Charles Williams brought forty bullets and a revolver to school. He ran into a bathroom stall to load his gun and start his shooting spree, which killed two and wounded thirteen. He had saved a bullet to kill himself, but police got him to surrender before he could take his own life.

Two days later, on the opposite coast, an eighth grade girl ran into the cafeteria of her Catholic school and fired two bullets. One of the bullets ricocheted off of the floor and hit a girl, only injuring her.

The violence moved back to California, this time at Granite Hills High. The shooter was 18-year-old Jason Hoffman. He had been rejected by the Navy a day earlier and injured five in his act of vengeance.

Space Station

Valentine's Day, 2001 was extra sweet for Thomas Jones and Robert Curbeam Jr. Together, they will go down in the history books for making the 100th spacewalk in United States space history. The two men floated outside of Atlantis, their space shuttle, as they worked on Alpha, the international space station. The men mounted and installed a science laboratory, Destiny on the space station. Alpha is now controlled by solar-powered gyroscopes instead of small thruster rocket fuel. The gyroscopes help cut the costs of using expensive rocket thruster fuel. With the gyroscopes in control, so too is NASA's Mission Control in Houston, Texas. The space station had previously only been run by flight controllers in Russia. The two Americans not only hooked up the solar-powered gyroscopes, they fixed the carbon dioxide-removal system. Astronauts around the world will benefit from the work of these two American men.

Earth Shakes

INDIA DESTROYED

On January 26, 2001, India was hit with its worst earthquake in fifty years. The quake hit the heart of India's western state of Gujarat. The quake registered a whopping 7.9 on the Richter scale. The quake flattened ninety percent of the homes and buildings in some parts on the country. Survivors were left homeless, jobless, and frightened as nearly 300 aftershocks left the country in a constant state of panic. One of the aftershocks registered a 5.3 on the Richter scale.

The devastation hit hard as survivors watched thousands of the earthquake's victims being burnt in makeshift crematoriums on the side of the road. The quake killed over twenty-five thousand, and it left hundreds of thousands more with no form of communications, no electricity, and no safe drinking water. The quake left millions of tons of rubble. People are now in a debate as to whether they should just leave the rubble where it is and build new towns for the survivors or whether they should try to clean up the rubble. Another problem is there is no place that can hold all of the rubble that was left behind. No matter which method clean-up is used, it will take decades to get the worst hit parts of India returned to normal, and even then, the people will never be the same again.

The Fall of

RUSSIA'S MIR

The space station Mir was guided back to her home planet, Earth, on March 23, 2001. Fragments of the massive spacecraft splashed down in the south Pacific Ocean just as ground controllers had planned, completing its mission in a fiery display that onlookers will never forget.

Mir had been orbiting Earth for fifteen years, and was run by the Russian Space Agency. It had been replaced by the International Space Station this year. The station weighed in at 135 tons and was, at the time, the heaviest thing orbiting our planet other than the moon. As it crashed down, Mir was traveling at approximately 15,000 miles an hour, according to NASA scientists. During its time in space, Mir played host to 104 cosmonauts and astronauts.

Elian Gonzalez is a name heard quite a lot in the last year. He was at the center of a heated struggle and a matter of national pride between two nations when he washed up on US waters in November of 1999. Elian's mother died while trying to reach Florida.

Police fire tear gas to disperse crowds at the Yugoslav Parliament who were protesting voting fraud by President Slobodan Milosevic.

Elian's father, Juan Gonzalez demanded the boy be sent back to Cuba. The trouble came when Elian's anti-Castro uncles in Miami decided it would be better for the child to live in America, provoking a bitter legal struggle.

Americans argued that Elian would have a better life in America. Cubans described it as a "kidnapping," forcing the child out of the country against his wishes. Eventually partial custody was granted to the uncles, however the INS ruling was later overturned, and the boy was sent back to Cuba.

Holy War

CONFLICTS CONTINUE

A clash of faiths in Jerusalem brought yet another jihad, or holy war, to Israel in the fall of 2000. Palestinians and Israelis both claimed Jerusalem as a holy city. They could not come to any resolutions, resulting in a Palestinian uprising that took the lives of many. Palestinians rose up against Israel after Israelis bombarded Palestinian cities in retaliation for the mob lynching of three Israelis. Judaism's holiest temple, the Temple Mount, was the site of many of the outbreaks. Palestinians began throwing rocks from the Al Aksa mosque which overlooks the Temple Mount. The Al Aksa mosque is Islam's third holiest site. Law officers were trying to keep Israelis away from the Western Wall because that is where many Palestinians were stationed with their rocks. Fights broke out among the citizens. Several died and hundreds were injured in what was the worst clash in the Holy City since 1996.

Bomber Executed

VICTIMS WATCH

A story that began in April, 1995, was thought to be finally put to a close in May, 2001.

Timothy McVeigh bombed the Alfred P. Murrah federal building in Oklahoma City on April 19, 1995, taking the lives of 168 people, including 19 children. He was convicted of the crime in 1997 and was imprisoned to await execution. He was set to be executed on May 16, 2001. However, in the days before the execution, new evidence surfaced within the FBI which delayed his execution.

His lethal injection would have been the first execution carried out by the federal government in almost forty years. More than 250 survivors and family members of the victims requested to witness McVeigh's death. The never-before-used execution chamber is only built to hold eight witnesses, but because the magnitude of the crime was so great, ten people, chosen by a lottery system, were to be allowed into the chamber.

Cloning...

ARE HUMANS NEXT?

Dolly the sheep was made into a star in July of 1996, when she became the product of many years of experimenting with cloning. Since that time, cloning has spread like wildfire throughout science laboratories everywhere. Cloning has spread from sheep to pigs to cows to mice. Scientists say it's just a matter of time before humans are the products of cloning as well.

The biggest problem that scientists foresee in human cloning is the fact that the cells of human embryos start producing proteins at an early stage. Because of this fast production rate, there is not as much time for the egg cytoplasm to reprogram to the transplanted nucleus. The good news for those in favor of human cloning is that mice have successfully been cloned and they, like humans, also have a high cell production rate.

The benefits of cloning include helping infertile couples have children who are biologically related to them, producing offspring free of certain diseases, helping revitalize endangered species, and there could be a mass production of cattle that secrete valuable drugs in their milk. Cloning is still in its early stages, and it is still being perfected, but many scientists say, "It's only a matter of time..."

Mad Cows?

NOT IN THE U.S.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy, better known as Mad Cow Disease, has affected many cattle around the world. Mad Cow Disease is a disease that attacks the brain and spinal cord, and eventually it is fatal. The disease is thought to be caused by feeding animal parts to the cattle. Since the United States banned such feedings in 1997, we have not had a problem with infected cattle. There is an ongoing battle of trying to detect the disease in the cattle early enough to kill it before it spreads. Humans can contract the disease from the cattle. In Europe alone, the disease has taken the lives of over one hundred people since its onset in the mid-1980's. Although not totally in the clear, Americans should consider themselves safe from the disease.

Bottled Up

BUT SAFE

Have you noticed the growing trend in bottled water? Everywhere you look, there it is. It is becoming one of the most popular bottled drinks on the market.

For over forty-five years, the World Health Organization (WHO) has been concerned with the quality of drinking water and its effect upon human health. Contaminants in drinking water can make people ill if exposed to them over a long period of time.

Currently, the Environmental Protection Agency has set standards for more than eighty contaminants in the water.

The body typically fights off these contaminants like it does any other germs. However, if the immune system is already weak from a disease such as HIV or AIDS or chemotherapy, the contaminants in the water can be deadly.

This explains the increase in bottled water because it's sealed in a sanitary container. There are also regulations on it: it can't contain sweeteners or chemical additives, it must be calorie-free, sugar-free, and sodium-free.

Feeling

THE HEAT

Can you feel it? The earth's temperature is due to rise two to six degrees in the next century. There are certain gases that naturally occur in the atmosphere to trap the sun's heat and keep the earth's temperature at fifty-nine degrees. When we burn fossil fuels and emit carbon dioxide into the air, more and more of the sun's heat becomes trapped. Ever since the industrial revolution, the amount of carbon dioxide gases emitted into the atmosphere has increased 27%. The amount of methane emitted has more than doubled.

Right now in Manhattan, there are about fifteen days a year in which the temperature reaches above 100 degrees. If the atmospheric gases continue to increase and the temperatures continue to rise, by mid-century, Manhattan will experience over forty-eight days of scorching heat over this temperature.

All About

THE OSCARS

The 73rd Annual Academy Awards held in Los Angeles, California, were no surprise. They brought the usual hype, glamour and chaos to the west coast. The walk down the red carpet brought out the hottest and newest fashion and accessory trends. Inside, Steve Martin entertained the crowd with humorous comments as he hosted this year's ceremony. Although there were a few surprises, most of the awards were predictable.

This year's nominations for Best Picture were Gladiator, Erin Brockovich, Traffic, Chocolat, and Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon. Gladiator took home the Oscar in this category however, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon took home the Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film. Gladiator was once again honored when its leading actor, Russell Crowe, was awarded the Oscar for Best Actor. It was no surprise when Julia Roberts was announced as the Best Actress for her performance in Erin Brockovich. The movie Traffic picked up an Oscar when its Benicio Del Toro won for Best Supporting Actor. The Best Supporting Actress Oscar was given to Marcia Gay Harden for her role in Pollock. Director Steven Soderbergh had the best chance to pick up the Best Director Oscar, as he was nominated twice. He was nominated for his work on Erin Brockovich and Traffic, and won an Oscar for the latter.

Reality TV

IT'S UNREAL

This viewing season CBS came up with it's own million dollar hit, Survivor. First aired in the summer of 2000, it was such a hit CBS created a sequel. Survivor: The Australian Outback which premiered after the Superbowl to record audiences.

Sixteen strangers are abandoned in the Australian Outback for forty-two days. The theme of the show is "outwit, outplay, outlast," and that is exactly what these people did. They were divided into two tribes who competed against each other. Every week, the two tribes had a challenge, and the losing tribe had to vote one of its members off the island. Once the sixteen had dwindled down to ten people, the two tribes combined into one.

The object of the game is to be the last person remaining after everyone else is voted off. The winner takes home one million dollars. The last nine people who remain become a "jury" as they get voted off. Once it's down to just two people, the jury votes on who it thinks should be the winner.

Reality shows like this and Big Brother, a spin off of The Real World have skyrocketed profits and been criticized by many critics.

The Million

DOLLAR QUESTION

"Is that your final answer?" was the catch phrase of the show Who Wants to be a Millionaire? This show caught the nation's attention when it debuted averaging 29 million viewers per show. This popularity continued into the 2001 season as "millionaire mania" picked up with many marketing tie-ins.

The object of the show is to correctly answer fifteen multiple choice questions and earn one million dollars. The first question is worth one-hundred dollars and the questions progressively become worth more money.

The contestant also has three lifelines which can help him/her correctly answer a troubling question. The contestant can choose to poll the audience and get their opinion on a question, call a friend who may know the answer, or eliminate two of the incorrect answers. Each lifeline may only be used once in the quest for one million dollars.

This hit show is aired as forty different versions in sixty-four different countries. As of April 11, 2001, there had been twenty-four lucky contestants who won the grand prize of one million dollars.

Limp Bizkit's

was Napster, the music service then just beginning to come under fire. Limp Bizkit's tour featured a preview to its album Chocolate Starfish and the Hot Dog Flavored Water.

The Napster controversy is somewhat settled, and the band has reached a stagnant poise on its road to success. Despite this, Limp Bizkit's Napster Free Tour was strayed from the usual way of doing things. In an interview with Rolling Stone, frontman Fred Durst was quoted as saying, "We couldn't care less about the older generation's need to keep doing business as usual."

The courts may have won the battle, but they haven't won the war. In July of 2000, Limp Bizkit announced a free tour.

With only about six cities on the list, fans of the hip hip/rap group were lined up for days to see the band perform. The tickets were available in person only, on a first-come first-serve basis. This resulted in overcrowded venues, numerous moshing-related injuries, and a free-music supporting band playing behind a metal gate.

The motivation behind the tour

Rage Against

THE BAND?

In October of 2000, only a month after an interesting display at the MTV Video Music Awards, where Rage Against the Machine bassist Tim Commerford climbed the set of the show, the band announced lead singer Zack De La Rocha would be leaving the band.

"I feel it is now necessary to leave Rage because our decision-making process has completely failed," said De La Rocha. This may or may not have something to do with the MTV incident, where the singer was reportedly so humiliated he left early. Although rumors of the breakup had been flying for years, not many fans listened to stories of conflict among the members, nor did they want to believe them.

In the band's own rapidly-written press release, they only reinforced the lead singer's statement, citing internal conflict that could not be resolved. Even after the announcement was made, fans remained in disbelief. The band's website did not back up the claims until almost two months later, when it was finally updated by the webmaster, and fans were then forced to accept the fate of yet another popular favorite.

The announcement was made just before the band's now-final release, The Battle of Los Angeles, and the three remaining members of the band have vowed to stay together, and continue to create music. As for Zack De La Rocha, he is currently in a rush to release his first solo album.

Band With

BUTTERFLY WINGS

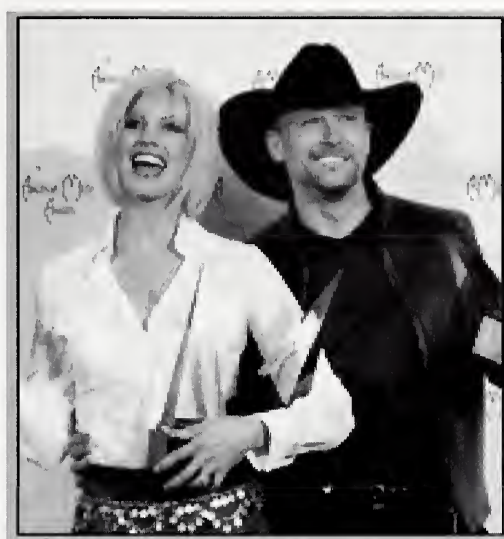

In a news conference with Los Angeles radio station KROQ on May 23, 2000 Smashing Pumpkins lead singer announced the final few months of the decade-old band's career. The group played their last show in the same venue that they began in: the Chicago Metro.

The band's announcement stunned some, but loyal followers had been anticipating it. In the final years bassist D'Arcy Wretzky left the Pumpkins; former Hole member Melissa Auf

Der Maur replaced her during the final days. In January, after just three months on the job, Sharon Osbourne, wife of Ozzy Osbourne, quit as the group's new manager due to difficulties working with Billy Corgan.

Despite difficulties the band maintained it's ever-forceful popularity, which still continues today. Their final CD entitled MACHINA/The Machines of God was released and received in classic Pumpkins style, and remains a classic in the hearts and minds of fans.

Awards Shows

BEYOND THE HYPE

So you've watched the MTV Video Music Awards since you were 10 and have marveled at all your favorite artists as they acheived Grammy fame.

It seemed there was a plethora of the mundane this year when it came to awards shows. Despite all attempts by programmers and artists alike to generate excitement for the presentations, they did not gain the usual "buzz" that accompanies them year after year.

Much of this can be attributed to the sheer number of shows there have been in recent years. These shows cover everything from European Music Awards to American Music Awards to Country Music Awards, and yet continue to award the same artists night after night.

If the winners this year disappointed you, don't be blue. At least you got to see your favorite boy band perform the same song 5 different times.

Bradley Soccer

KICKS INTO THE NCAA

VICTORY

For the first time in Bradley history, the mens soccer team earned a bid into the NCAA Tournament. Despite a thrilling and heartbreaking loss to Creighton (2-3) in the MVC finals, it was announced that Bradley would receive an at-large bid to play among the 32 best teams. The emotion levels skyrocketed as they prepared to make their initial appearance in the tournament, which by chance was played on their home field. Unfortunately they were knocked out in the first round by UIC.

The varsity program began 14 years ago and has been getting stronger every year since. This year there were two team members chosen as candidates for All-American, senior Bryan Namoff and junior Gavin Glington. These two along with sophomore Hamid Mehreioskouei, made up Bradley's triple-threat combination. This trio dominated the field and stunned the Creighton team when Bradley beat them 4-1 earlier this season. They weren't the only ones with strong leadership skills though; everyone contributed to the team.

Goalkeeper Adam Gross was a large asset to the great season. He was named MVC player of the week four times this season. He also has an incredible record of 113 saves.

To conclude a superior season Bradley was awarded with six postseason Valley honors. Earning positions on the first team All-MVC was Namoff, Glington and Mehreioskouei. Earning a second team All-MVC position was sophomore Tim Regan and an honorable mention went to goalkeeper Gross. Freshman Ryan Glynn was also chosen to be a member of the MVC All-Newcomer team.

THE THINGS THAT WE DO TODAY, DETERMINE WHERE WE

A look at the history of Bradley Football

Bradley Football made a comeback this year and the Braves did extremely well against tough competition. That's right, Football! Cheerleaders, Pep Rallies, Homecoming, etc.

In reality, there has not been a football team at Bradley for over 14 years. The cost of supporting a football team and a basketball team was too exorbitant and the University chose to stick with their basketball program.

The imaginary football team was a gag designed by WCCT radio station and Old Style beer to give Bradley something to talk about before opening of basketball season. The idea was introduced by the radio announcers and by the distribution of football schedule posters which were supplied by Old Style.

Under the coaching abilities of Hank Hilltop, the Braves played at Sally Field in Peoria. The non-existent team drew a lot of support from the students throughout the fall semester and all in all, was a lot of fun! *Story from 1985 Anaga.

DOMINATES THE NETS

POWER

This season was rough for the Braves. Only few wins marked the scoreboards but much was learned and accomplished that will last longer than the sensation a person gets from winning a match.

Throughout the season the teams emphasized individual effort with team prosperity. Many of the players improved and bettered their techniques which will lead the team to a competitive future.

One thing that changed this year was the coaching. This year Sheryl Stattler took the head position for the women and Drew Barrett took on the task of coaching the men. This takeover didn't take place until the fall season and so, as always, things were rough in the beginning.

The teams are proud that four athletes were selected for the MVC Scholar-Athlete Team for the women, junior Beth Hoag, first-team; senior Kim Sommer, honorable mention. For the men: senior Alex White, first-team; and junior Bret Martin, honorable mention.

STANDING

With the loss of graduate Abigail Kohnen, who led last year's team in kills, the volleyball team was unsure how they would stand up to their 20 win season last year. However, they found leadership in junior Laura Benzing. Benzing led the team this year with a season total of 365 kills.

Bradley started the season off on the right path but somehow went astray. They were ranked third in the pre-season picks and had a powerful season-opening win against Toledo. They also went on to win the Mark Twain Hotels Volleyball Invitational and placed second in the Wildcat Classic. The season was up and down from there on as they finished with a record of 15-12. The matches were hard fought though, and many took the full five games to determine a win or loss. The season was concluded with a loss to Illinois State.

Despite their record the team still had many successes. Both Benzing and junior Sam Hardwick were named to the Verizon/CoSIDA District V All-Academic teams. Benzing earned a position on the first team and Hardwick a position on the second team. They also were selected as members of the MVC Scholar-Athlete team during the season. Benzing led the team not only in kills but in blocks as well with a total of 114 for the season. Hardwick led the team in assists (672), digs (337), and service aces (32).

The program may not have been at its best this season but will return many players next season and are hopeful of achieving great things.

RACES TO THE EDGE

GOT

The Bradley University mens and womens cross country teams started the year with a small roster for the 2000 season. They started the season with hopes of individual success as well as team success.

The men returned seven letter winners from last year and added four freshman to the squad. Senior Aaron Hart had plans to make it to the MVC Conference Championships. If he does, he will be the first male cross-country runner from Bradley to achieve all-conference honors since 1989.

Other outstanding runners this season were senior John Beattie, junior Phil Alexander and Matt Occhipinti.

The women Braves consisted of seniors Anglie Zimmerman and Katie Lodes, juniors Ann Williams and Stephanie Aneloski, sophomores Janelle Birky, Tamara Hart, and Jennie Lang.

The Braves looked to Angie Zimmerman as their team leader. Head cross-country coach Dave Beauchem had great expectations the women. Beauchem said, "If we can stay healthy, I think we will surprise some people in the Valley."

Improvement was the goal on the green this past year. Head Coach Bo Ryan knew the men had ability and all that they had to do was be more competitive on the course. They began their season with seniors Jason Cargill and Mike Fastert averaging 78.9 from the fall season. Leading the Braves after the fall was sophomore

Andy Mickelson with a 76.0 scoring average.

The ladies began the season with hopes of a winning a second MVCC and a first NCAA bid. They started the spring season with two tournament victories from the fall. Leading the ladies team in the fall was sophomore Jill Swenson, who averaged 76.8. Other golfers looking for the championship was Laura Patrick and Kelly Dillon. The women knew that they had the ability and all they had to do was prove it.

TIME FOR CHANGE

KICKING
IT HARD

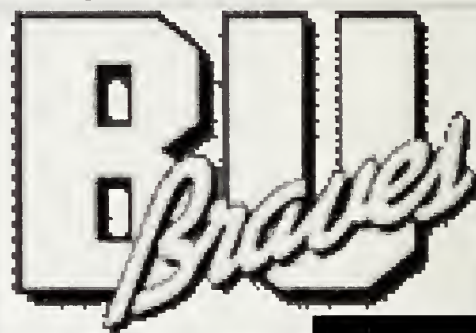

The 2000-2001 club soccer season was a extraordinary year for the girls. They received support from all over which really helped raise their spirits. This was the first year club soccer got funding from SABRC as a student activity. They also got a lot of support from the guys team, espeically when the guys showed up in their uniforms to watch the girls play.

This years club soccer showed some true leadership and dedication. The captains for this season were Renee Lopez, who is also the president, Lisa Bell, and Rachel Rogers, all who are seniors. when Renee was elected president last spring she said she only had three major goals in mind for the team: finding a good conditioning coach and head coach; getting some other competition than their club league; and increasing the commitment level. She believes that the definitely met the first two but the third is somewhat difficult considering the players schedules.

HITS IT HARD

The mens Club Volleyball team put up quite a fight this season. Giving it all that they had they finished in third place in the Illinois College Tournament. This allowed them to finish the season with a 3-3 conference record and an overall record of 4-3.

Steve Elliot, one of the team's leading front players, was honored by being selected as a memeber of the all-tournament team.

Other leaders for the Bradley team were co-captain Adem Kulauzovic and new-comer Brent Busse.

The team this year consisted of 15 men who practiced rigorously from 10-12pm. every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evening. Their goal of the season was to beat Augustana, consistently ranked number one in the conference. Unfortunately they fell a little short but have a strong desire to achieve it next season as they work hard to perfect their 5-1 game.

Bradley Basketball

DANCING TO THE NIT

Talent and determination were prevalent as the Bradley mens basketball team took the floor this past season. Their efforts unfortunately didn't exceed their expectations. A mere forty minutes away from winning the MVC Championship and earning themselves an invitation to the NCAA Tournament, Indiana State made a miraculous comeback to beat the Braves 69-63. Senior forward Ed Cage had a career-high 20 points in the final game. Throughout the season Cage, along with other seniors Jeff Rabey and Jerome Robinson, led the team with their strong character and skills.

This leadership was passed on to freshman Phillip Gilbert who was named to the All-tournament team. Also receiving honors this year was Robinson, named to CollegeInsider.com's All-Defense Team. Robinson was also selected as the MVC Defensive Player of the Year.

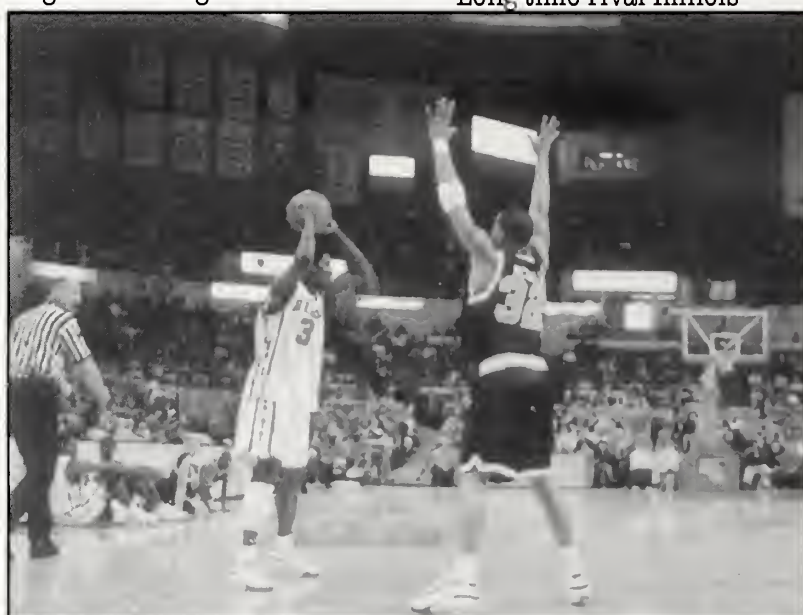

Long-time rival Illinois

State tied for second place in the MVC with Bradley. This led to a "War on 74" tie-breaking game at ISU. Proving their strength and worthiness, the Braves beat the Redbirds 64-52, in front of the 11,309 people that packed Carver Arena. The Braves received encouragement and enthusiasm from the student body that filled the "Red Zone" at each game. This area is a designated student section in which students are dressed in a Bradley Athletics shirt.

The Braves didn't end without a post-season. It may not have been the "Big Dance" they had wanted to be a part of, but it was quite an accomplishment to be selected for the NIT Tournament. Their appearance in the MVC finals and overall record of 19-11 earned them the NIT berth.

Coach Stefanie McAllister started this year's season looking for one thing, leadership. With the loss of six starters from last season, the coach had a lot of questions. Filling the gaps were seniors Gina Calerone, Amy Fouts, Jackie Starkey, and junior Rachel Gensch. Their work was definitely cut out for them as they added nine newcomers to the team.

One thing that did not change from last season was the pitching line up, including senior Jamie Strinz and sophomore Cristin Evans returning on the rubber. New players Sandra Britt and Nicole Schude were anxiously awaiting some pitching time.

With dedication and leadership, the lady Braves had a strong season.

The Bradley track team had a great year. Many individuals set personal records. Ann Williams finished first in 10,000m run at SIV-E Twilight open with the second fastest time in the MVC this season. Janelle Birky finished 13th at MVC Indoor Championships in the mile run. Kim Corns led the throwers at the Purdue open in the shot put and hammer.

The team as a whole also had a extraordinary year. Bradley finished sixth at Big Blue Classic. They also finished 7th at Pacesetter Invitational. At Lee Calhoun Memorial they finished 10th. All in all the members of the 2000-2001 team have many reasons to hold their heads up high and be proud.

The mens team was not as fortunate. While they were strong on the track they lacked in numbers. Also in the near future the athletic department is looking at cutting the mens track program even more.

FUTURE LEADERS OF AMERICA

The College of Business Administration majors provide a solid grounding in the skills and concepts necessary to meet the complex and challenging tasks of management. It offers two majors: business computer systems and management and administration. In a few years, these are the people you'll be talking to when

Communications & Fine Arts

KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH THE FUTURE

The interactive world of modern programs in communications and fine arts comes together in its three main buildings: the Caterpillar Global Communications Center, Heuser Art Center, and Constance Music Hall. Aside from CAD technology used in the engineering department, COM majors have the opportunity to use state-of-the-art facilities and equipment to gain cutting edge experience. The latest offering from this college is the Multimedia major, a combined communication and art program. The Slane

College also offers degrees in art history, studio art, communication, music, performance, music education, composition, and theatre arts. So think about those billboards you see on the drive home from work. Our studio art majors, as the graphic designer of the future, will be creating what you see on the roadways. On another “note,” our radio stations will eventually be playing some tunes composed or performed by Bradley students majoring in the music field. Similarly, who better to teach our future youngsters than a music teacher who graduated from Bradley?

Education & Health Sciences

SERVING AMERICA
SINCE 1897

The College of Education and Health Sciences has as its primary focus the development of leaders in the human service professions including education, counseling, nursing, family and consumer sciences, health sciences, physical therapy, and administration. This is where our teachers come from, and let's face it, where would we be without teachers? When we have problems, we can call our therapists who help us work through them. Nurses take care of our future generations, human services graduates become the backbone of community action agencies, physical therapists soothe our strained bodies, and administrators preside over our country's institutions, all brought to us in part by Bradley University.

Engineering & Technology

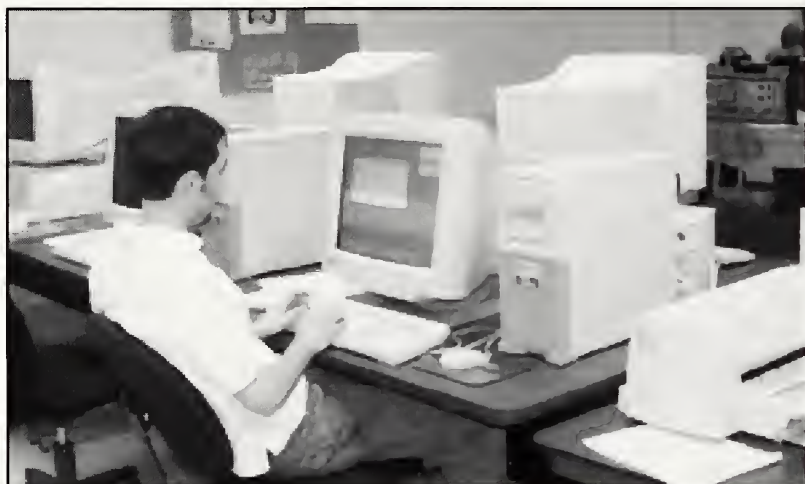

KEEPING AMERICA
NUMERICALLY
FUNCTIONAL.

Engineering and technology are areas that demand a continual upgrading of technical skills and expansion of knowledge. The College of Engineering and Technology offers challenges and rewards to students who are curious about what constitutes the physical reality of their world. There are many different fields of engineering to major in. Bradley offers civil engineering, manufacturing engineering, construction, electrical engineering, engineering physics, industrial engineering, manufacturing engineering technology, and mechanical engineering. What a grand list for what is considered one of Bradley's strongest colleges! All those engineering and technology majors out there tackle their mathematics-based homework today with great gusto. They spend hours a night working on calculus based physics and problems that math-fearing people never wanted to know about! Students graduating from this college will help our future world function, and keep our industries running.

Liberal Arts & Sciences

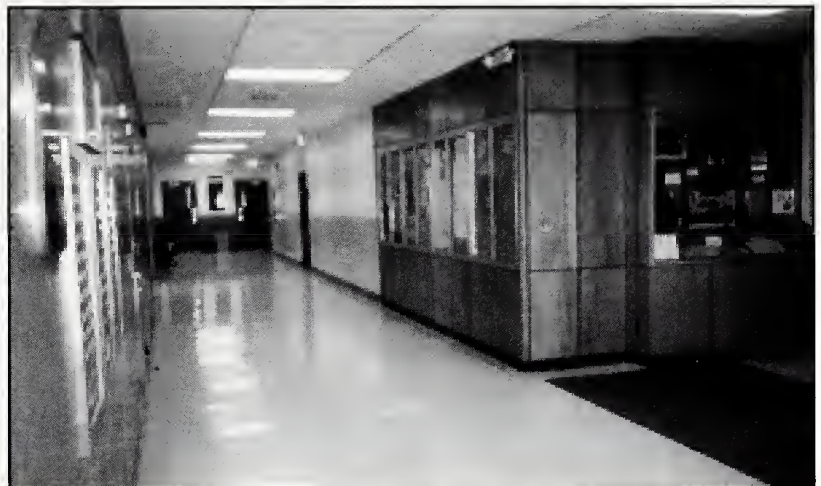

THE RENAISSANCE
PEOPLE OF OUR SOCIETY

Students involved in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences obtain a rich education in every aspect of their educational development. As a student once said, they are truly the "movers and the shakers" of our world. Bradley focuses its curriculum in this college mainly on academics. Here, the latest theories and ideas relating to biochemistry are given a chance to prove themselves. This is also where the mathematics department is based.

The purpose of a liberal arts education is to learn that a person can like both cats and dogs!

Anonymous”

We are able to refer to the students involved in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences as Renaissance people because of Bradley's strong foundation in the past, as well as its focus on the future. Society during the Renaissance period got its inspiration for their art and architecture from the past classical periods of ancient Greek and Roman times. They were people who had received a little education in everything, much like our general education requirements today.

The main hallway of Bradley Hall is where the school's most prestigious awards are hung for all to see.

The apple of Bradley's eye: Bradley Hall. No matter what your major, you will at one time or another enter into these walls and learn things. If you are lucky, perhaps it will be many things!

General Education Requirements

THE "FINE" IN REFINEMENT

Every undergraduate student at Bradley university must complete a series of required courses which fall under the category of general education. These classes, as one Bradley administrator once said, are what set Bradley University graduates apart from technical or junior college graduates. Gen Eds, as commonly referred to, make a student well-rounded in all areas of academics. In short, you can't graduate without having all General Education courses requirements completed with a satisfactory grade in each. It is the goal of the majority of lower-class students to finish up these courses in the beginning of their school career, so that they won't have to take that one class that you dread taking in the spring semester of your senior year. Nonetheless, general education requirements are the standard of all respectable universities. There is a slim to none chance that there is a quality university that will graduate you without fulfilling these formative courses. So, enjoy the other aspects of life during these classes, and take them as they come.

Education has really only one basic factor: one must want it.
G.E. Woodbury

The Hartman Center is where the majority of the school's theatrical productions take place. It also houses a small art gallery with art available for purchase.

Studying vs. Not Studying

EVERYTHING YOU'VE ALWAYS WONDERED ABOUT

Should you go to that party Tuesday night? You have a quiz in economics tomorrow, and you need to finish some biology homework, but you've had a hard day and feel you deserve a break to kick back with your friends. I think we all know the answer to this general question: study, silly! You're here at Bradley for a reason, and, although you might wonder about this at times, it's not to get wasted seven days a week. If you have the drive to stay focused on your studies, then you're showing your superior responsibility skills. Another reason you can, then add the

shouldn't blow off your education is quite obvious: if you abstain from non-curricular activities during the “work week,” living the college life will be much more appreciated. Of course, all this doesn't mean kicking your friends to the curb during the week. Regulate your schedule. Most college students have already gotten this idea down, but it can always use a plug here and there. If all this isn't enough to keep you motivated in school, think about your future. Who is going to succeed: the scholar or the fool?

Here's a quality example of buckling down and doing what you have to do. All it takes is a little self-determination.

Chris Stedman is helping Kristen Reed prepare for her upcoming Calculus exam.

Change it up! Do your homework outside on a nice day. Fresh air is always good! Word to the wise: don't try this during thunderstorms, blizzards, or tornados. -Anaga 1970.

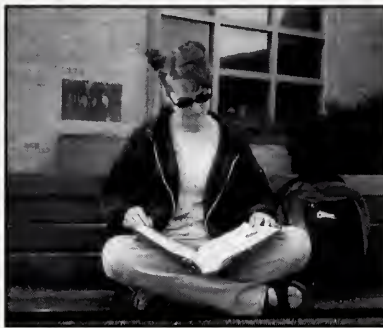

CAFFINE, ANYONE?

STAY AWAKE FOR ANYTHING!

1. Coffee/Jolt!/Sugar
2. 20 minute naps throughout day
3. Cold water
4. Run, walk, jog, healthy stuff
5. Really really loud music
6. Take a break to do something else
7. Watch commercials for "blooper" videos
8. Get involved with what you're doing

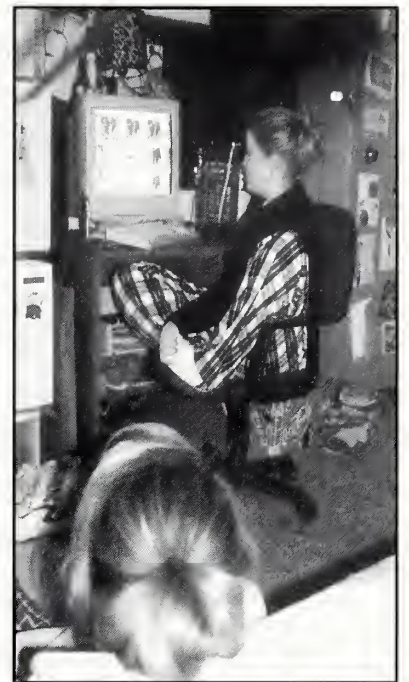

One thing you learn from college: sleep catches up with you. -Anaga 1954.

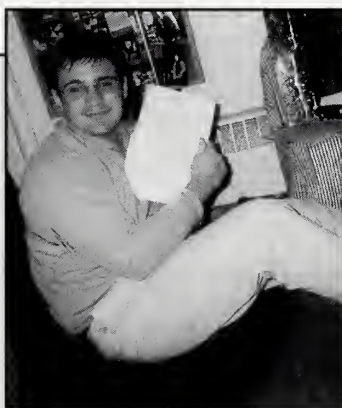

Jill Horton, a sophomore biology major, takes advantage of sunny weather to study her biology.

Video games have a quite diverting effect. There's a time when you need to put the controller down, and pick up a textbook. Zelda can wait for another day. Reward yourself with a quick game after you finish an assignment. Structure yourself now and succeed in the future.

Computers are one of today's largest distractions. Even when it's not you on the computer, for some reason when you don't want to do something, watching someone else on a computer can be very entertaining.

WHAT HELPS YOU STAY FOCUSED ON YOUR WORK?

I take breaks every once and a while and talk to people. It helps me break my concentration level.

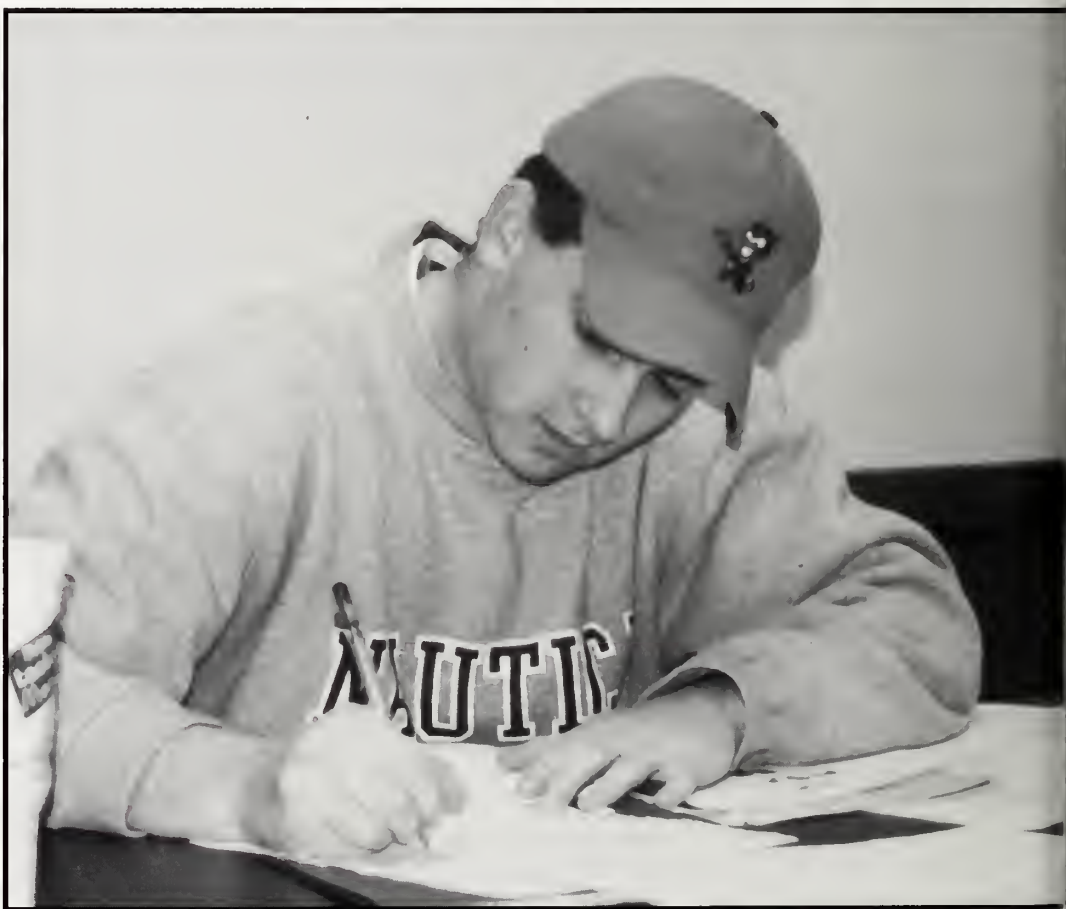

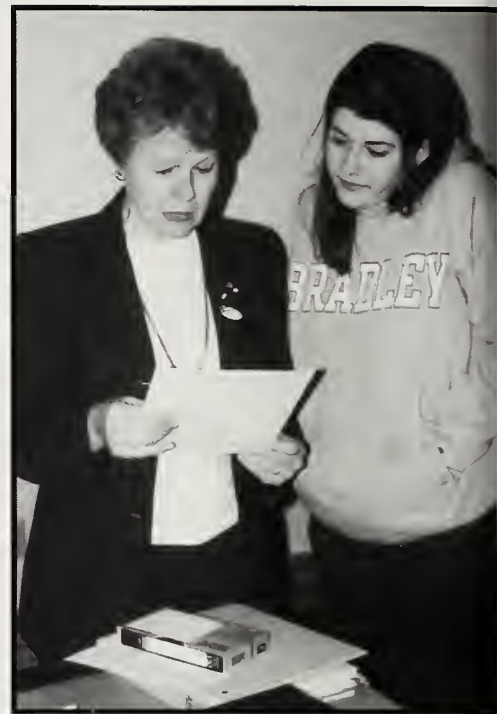

Rebecca Mammen

I help friends with their stuff. Thinking about something completely different allows me to get into my own work.

ORGANIZATIONS

*No matter what your interests were,
Bradley offered an organization to get involved in. From the Bradley
Ultimate Frisbee Fanatics to Student Senate, the year was filled with meetings and events for many organization members. With over 230 organizations there was something for everyone, and many students discovered the more they got involved, the more valuable their college experience was as they created memories to look back on over the years to come...*

"Bradley's well rounded club program offers each student an opportunity to actively participate in extra-curricular evetns. Thirty-three departmental, eleven social, eight religious, and nineteen honorary organizations prived expression in many fields."

STUDENT AIDES

STUDENT AIDES

by: Gayle Emery

The main focus of the Student Aides is to help the incoming freshmen make a smooth and easy transition from high school to college during their Freshman Orientation sessions.

The Student Aides devoted the majority of the summer to preparing for the numerous tasks at the Freshmen Orientation. They worked together to prepare informational and fun skits and games for the freshmen to listen to and participate in during their Orientation sessions. The eleven Student Aides collectively served as guides and friends for the group of freshmen as a whole. But besides that, each Student Aide took care of and payed special attention to a small group of specific freshmen.

Through the help of the Student Aides, the incoming freshmen were more able to make friends and learn about the campus and university. And because of that, Bradley University became "home" to many students much faster.

CAMPUS CRUSADE

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST

By: Christine
Fitzpatrick

Campus Crusade for Christ's Mission is to turn lost students into "Christ-centered laborers" (Matthew 28). The peer leaders of this organization have a weekly challenge as to where to focus their efforts. The most visible aspect of Campus Crusade is the weekly meeting called Real Life. However, this is only one aspect of Crusade.

There are also outside activities that any student may partake in. There are Bible studies, an evangelism team that does service evangelism projects, and student-led prayer groups. Another important aspect of Crusade is their Winter Break Retreat, which is supposed to help with the organization's foundational goal: to seek to help students in their walk with Christ.

Campus Crusade for Christ

This organization opens itself up to every single person on campus for their weekly meetings as well as their outside activities. Therefore, there is no fixed member list.

NEWMAN CENTER

by: Gayle Emery

Catholic students at Bradley University have the opportunity to study and pray in the quiet comfort of the Newman Center. Father Antoine and Father Joseph Mary serve the students as priests and guides. The students can join in a number of meaningful activities. Some of these activities include daily masses and Adoration in the Chapel, confession, spiritual retreats, and rock-climbing trips. There are also community service opportunities such as working in soup kitchens and visiting nursing homes.

Students can also learn more about themselves and the Catholic religion through Bible study and Catechism classes.

Overall, the Newman Center provides the Catholic students at Bradley with many kinds of spiritual and social gatherings that benefit their lives and experience here.

BU FELLOWS

By: Christine
Fitzpatrick

Membership in BU Fellows is a hard goal to achieve. A person must have a high GPA from high school, extracurricular involvement, and a willingness to dedicate time to the Peoria community. Fellows are a committed group of students that participate in both weekly and bi-weekly projects. They each choose a place to fulfill their continual placement hours (30 per semester). This volunteerism ranges from helping at The Children's Home to helping with patients at nearby hospitals. Fellows also need a minimum of 10 hours of one-time placement volunteerism.

Another big part of Fellows is the B.U.I.L.D. program, which consists of three tiers of leadership classes. The Fellows is an organization that dedicates itself to the betterment of the community.

There are approximately 110 students who volunteer when they can through this organization. Pictured here is a shack from Shack-a-Thon, an event hosted by Habitat for Humanity. For Shack-a-Thon, each participating organization had at least one member in its shack for every hour during the 24 hours. The event was to make students more aware of and compassionate toward the homeless.

CIRCLE K

By: Gayle Emery

Bradley University Circle K is a community service organization that combines volunteerism and charity with social gatherings. The students can participate in any number of service projects ranging from tutoring children to helping with fundraising events in order to aid in the fight against diseases, such as Spastic Paralysis.

Circle K is an international organization that strives for the betterment of mankind. Throughout the year, Circle K members here at Bradley unite with members from other universities to serve people in need. Through all the work, the students make new friends and have a good time with their old friends.

SYMPHONIC BAND

BRADLEY BANDS

by: Gayle Emery

There are many bands that a student at Bradley can participate in. A student can choose to audition for the Symphonic Winds, the Symphonic Band, the Jazz Ensemble, the Jazz Band, the Basketball Band, the Jazz Combo I, the Jazz Combo II, and other smaller ensembles. Each band organization practices each week in preparation for performances and concerts.

The bands at Bradley are composed of a very diverse group of students whose majors come from every college on Bradley's campus.

In addition to performing in the various band organizations, the band students also host the 200 high school students who visit Bradley and participate in the twice yearly Bradley University Honor Band Program.

COMMUNITY CHORUS

BRADLEY COMMUNITY CHORUS

by: Gayle Emery

This organization was formed in 1958. The basis of the formation of the group was to allow students and community members the opportunity to study and perform choral-orchestral masterworks. Since 1958, the Community Chorus has performed one or more major works each semester. The group performs these works with either the Bradley Chamber Orchestra or the Peoria Symohony Orchestra.

This year, the Community Chorus performed Mozart's Solemn Vespers, K. 339, Bernstein's Chichester Psalms, and the Verdi Requiem.

At the beginning of each semester, auditions are held for anyone either at Bradley or in the community who has choral singing experience. Dr. John Jost heads Bradley's Community Chorus.

CHAMBER ORCHESTRA

BASKETBALL BAND

By: Gayle Emery and
Christine Fitzpatrick

The game is about to start. The screaming fans are bouncing to the music. Who plays this music? Well, it is the Basketball Band, of course. They play pep music at all mens and womens home games. That totals to about 7 or 8 games a month. In addition, they are required to be in either the Symphonic Winds, Symphonic Band, Chamber Orchestra, or Jazz Ensemble. There are a few pep rallies that the members must attend in hopes of bringing some school spirit to Bradley's students.

Every year, the basketball band attends the Missouri Valley Conference and plays for the mens basketball team. If the team wins this conference, then the Basketball Band has the privilege of joining them at an NCAA post-season game.

BRADLEY SCOUT

BRADLEY SCOUT

What is the first thing that BU students do every Friday morning on their way to class? They pick up the Bradley Scout, BU's only campus newspaper.

This newspaper not only informs but also entertains its many readers, serving as the best way for the entire campus to stay informed about campus and national events.

The members of the Scout dedicate substantial amounts of time during both weekdays and weekends to make sure that each issue is up to par by deadline. Its staff try to improve upon each previous issue whether it be by changing the stories or the appearance from the last paper.

The Scout also serves each member by giving them an invaluable experience that will aid them in their future endeavors.

SHOTOKAN KARATE

by: Gayle Emery

The Shotokan Karate class here at Bradley University is taught by "sensei" Tim Maga. The class training the participants receive from Dr. Maga is identical to any Shotokan training actually taught in Japan. Shotokan is the oldest and most traditional of all the karate styles. It has been used for such militaristic forces as Emperor Hirohito's Imperial Army during WWII and today's Japan Area Self-Defense Force.

All of the people in the Shotokan class work to master the "basics" of Shotokan Karate before they go on to actual sparring. The "basics" include stances, punches, blocks, and kicks. And once the sparring occurs, it is not merely fighting; it is a combination of intellectual thought and strategy and fighting technique.

The Shotokan Karate class provides excellent ways of making friendships, getting great workouts, and learning about Japan's history and culture.

Do you remember when you were a senior in high school, and you came for a tour of Bradley's campus? Well, the Admissions Office Tour Guides are the people who showed you around campus.

Their goals are to highlight the most popular places on campus such as the library, the dorms, and the Student Center. These tour guides also help with all the Visit Programs throughout the year, by giving tours, and answering the questions of all the families touring campus.

The tour guides are chosen for their school spirit, outgoing personalities, and involvement on campus.

LOOKING BACK . . .

Years from now, when you pull your yearbook out from a dusty box and crack open its pages, how you will look back on this year? What will you remember? I doubt you will remember your schedule of classes or the all-nighter you pulled during finals week. However, I bet you will remember your first college crush, your freshman year roommate and that friend you could always call at three in the morning. So many people think that college is all about academics, but really, what will you remember from your days here at Bradley fifty years from now?

"After we are college graduates, and someone we meet asks, 'What class were you in?', each of us will proudly answer, 'the class of 1950,' or 'class of 1951.' Perhaps the stranger, too, was graduated in the same year and we will have discovered a common ground for discussion. The conversaiton may concern those things, however small or insignificant they might have been, which we associated with college classes and classmates."

The 2000-2001 ANAGA was truly a compilation of the efforts of many dedicated individuals. The ANAGA staff would like to thank the following people for their continued support. Without your contributions, this book would not have been possible.

Greg Killoran and Linda- for putting up with our endless questions about budget and payroll
Tom Gunter, our advisor- for supporting us in the final hours when we needed you most Duane and ITPS Photography- for all of your great photographs
Steve and the rest of the B & M Staff- for all of your digital work with the senior and underclassmen pictures
Mike Budak, our Jostens Representative- for helping us out throughout the year
Linda Williamson at the Jostens Plant- for answering all of our technical questions

The 2001 ANAGA yearbook of Bradley University, Volume 50, was printed by Jostens Printing and Publishing, State College, Pennsylvania. It was produced using the Jostens Yeartech desktop publishing program for PageMaker 6.5 on Macintosh computers.

Cover: The cover base is Navy litho with a Striped grain. Lettering on the cover is in Silver (877). The cover design was conceived by Brandy Burhans.

Pages: The 2001 ANAGA includes 216 pages. The page stock used for all of the pages is 80% Gloss, trimmed 9 X 12.

Design: The entire book was designed by ANAGA staff members. Each section was designed by its section editor and assistant editor(s). The opening, closing, index, and division pages were designed by Brandy Burhans.

Photography: Portrait photography was provided by B & M Studio of Pekin, Illinois. Other photographs were obtained through Bradley University photographer Duane Zehr and Instructional Technology and Production Services. Some photographs were courtesy of contributors. All other photographs were taken by ANAGA staff members.

The ANAGA is advised by Tom Gunter and falls under the jurisdiction of the Communications Council chaired by Greg Killoran, Executive Director of Cocurricular Development. The ANAGA is a student activity with open membership and works in collaboration with the Student Activities Office. The ANAGA is funded by book sales, commissions, and student activity fees allocated through the Student Activity Budget Review Committee. Inquiries about publication can be directed to:
